Executive Summary

Results	Synopsis
Conversion Funnel	This analysis shows the number of days between a user's first interaction date and their purchase date, calculating both the Total CS (Customer Sessions) and Converted CS. For example, if a user first visited the site on January 1 and completed a purchase on January 10, the time to conversion is 9 days. Across all users, this allows us to quantify how many customer sessions occurred before conversion, such as 1,250 Total CS, with 320 Converted CS, helping identify how long it typically takes users to convert and where drop-offs occur.
Retention Rates	Will show the retention rates by month of purchase
Analysis	Description
Raw Data	Each row represents a user activity or event on the company's website. Every time a user views a product page, opens their shopping cart, or completes a purchase, that interaction is recorded and stored in the activity logs.
Conversion Funnel	This sheet shows how users interact with the website by capturing and organizing key actions they take during their visit. It records behaviors such as page views, product interactions, cart activity, and completed purchases, allowing us to visualize the user journey from entry to conversion. The goal of this sheet is to help identify engagement patterns, understand where users drop off, evaluate the effectiveness of website features, and support data-driven decisions to improve user experience and overall conversion performance.
Retention Rates	This Sheet focus on aggregating purchase data into cohorts and calculating month-by-month retention rates to understand how customer behavior evolves over time and to measure long-term engagement and loyalty across different user groups.
